TURRETS OF BATTLESHIPS

Construction Board's Report Handed to Secretary Long.

dinary or Superposed Structures for the Vessels to Be Referred to the Board of Inspection and Survey and Officers of Experience.

The question of whether the battleships Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Georgia shall have their principal guns mounted in superposed or ordinary turrets is now fairly before the Secretary of the Navy, the report of the Board on Construction having been handed to him yesterday together with a minority report from Rear Admiral Bradford, Chief of the Bureau of Equip-

The disagreement in the board, in its consideration of general plans for the three battleships, arose over the turret question and from the fact that four of the five members signed a report favoring the installation of six ordinary turrets on each vessel, instead of two superposed turrets and two ordinary turrets, Admiral Bradford's idea. It was supposed that Secretary Long would follow the recommendations of the majority, the usual course of the Department in matters referred to a committee of technical expects. Secretary Long has decided, however, to depart from that practice, and it was evident from what he said yesterday that he had practically determined to refer the turret question to the Board of Inspection and Survey and to several officers of experience and ability, who may be added to the in-spection board for the occasion. The Secretary is not inclined to favor a suggestion that the reports of the Board on Con-struction be submitted to the general or campaign board of which Admiral Dewey is president. It has been the Secretary's intention from the first not to submit of the campaign board any matters concern-ing the construction of warships, and this Intention was made plain in the order establishing that board. It is not unlikely however, that some members of the cam-paign board may be selected as part of the committee of which the inspection board will be the nucleus.

Secretary Long's practical determina-tion to refer that turret controversy to another group of naval officers fits in well with Admiral Bradford's contention in his minority report that the question is tactical rather than one of construction, involving a ship's ability to fight well in action more than her structural strength, speed and most practicable battery arrangement with regard to the distribution of weight. While the Board on Construction did not agree on ordinary turrets until it had discussed the relative merits of both types of gun protec-tion for the purposes of actual warfare, its members were perhaps influenced by considerations involving their individual branches of ship construction in forming their ideas, and this has apparently had much to do in bringing Secretary Long to the practical conclusion that a board concerned more with the adaptability and availability of a vessel for service under all conditions, is well qualified to pass upon the matter at issue. The inspection board made a very complimentary report of the Kearsarge's superposed turrets, and will soon have another opportunity of testing the practicability and efficiency of these unique structures in the final trial of the battleship Kentucky, the sister ship of the Kentserge the Kenrsarge, Rear Admiral Bradford's argument in regaraded M. Yeatman. favor of superposed turrets is regaraded in naval circles as remarkably strong. His ideas have been discussed by most naval men s use the Board on Construction de-cided the turret question several weeks ago, and there is apparently a large number of thinking naval men who believe the superposed turret should be continued as part of the equipment policy of the service, and this in the face of the majority of the construction board. The strongest point made by Admiral Bradford in his minority report is that the strongest point made by Admiral Bradford in his minority report is that the strongest point made by Admiral Bradford in his minority report is that the strongest point made by Admiral Bradford in his minority report is that at six possible angles of fire, a vessel and eight 8s, has at five of these angles the advantage of two more guns on a side than the vessel with the battery arrangement proposed by the majority of the construction board—six ordinary turrets containing the same number of guns, divided in regard to calibre as the guns in the superposed turrets would be.

In the sixth case, the superposed turners and Dewey:

Mr. Herbert was urged by the Board on Construction, as then composed to adopt the superposed turnet for the Kearsarge and the Kentucky. He would not act in a matter of such great impor-tance, however, until he had submitted it to the consideration of a number of naval officers of high rank and known ability. Only two of these, one a staff officer, were not inclined to favor the superposed type, but they were so hopelessly in the minor-

Office of the Admiral,

Dear General Breekinridge: I am in receipt of your letter of the 6th instant, and bur to express my hearty sympathy with the objects of the American Flag Association. I have always been opposed to the descrating of the flag in any form whatever, and I have seen during my service in the navy great advances in the respect shown it even by our sailors. In the olden days it was not an uncommon thing for a flag to be folded and used as a cushion in a beat, but this would not be thought of at the present time.
Indeed, the flag is now regarded as a most sacred object in the navy, and so board ship, whenever it is hoisted, all work stops, all hands stand that the day is not distant when all people shall

SPANISH CANNON HARMLESS.

Rumors That Guns Presented to States Were Londed Denied. Several rumors have reached the War Department to the effect that some of the old Spanish cannon captured during the late war and presented to the various States had been found to be loaded,

"The story probably emanated from the years has been connected with the Gov- excessive caution used in delivering the guns," said Major McNally, Chief Clerk of the Bureau of Ordnance, yesterday. "Before sending any arms or projectiles anywhere, it is our ironclad rule that an admonition to the officer caring for the guns, to be sure that they are not loaded, is always underscored in several places on the orders issued. Some one has thus developed an idea that at some time guns have been sent loaded, but this is an impossibility. The examination is always very strict and the tests are made faithfully. I do not believe that any of these guns could possibly have been loaded."

repudiates the suggestion that the Sultan ever fails to pay his honest debts. Incidentally, he intimates that the Sultan has a fighting force of 2,600,600 men at hand ready to do business when the occasion may arise. Admiral Ahmed adds that any alleged creditor trying to collect a claim should not overlook that fact.

The admiral is in this country to arrange for the purchase of an Americanbuilt cruiser for the Turkish navy. He has made his preliminary arrangements for a vessel with the Cramp people and with the Union Ironworks of San Francisco. Now he is waiting for them to complete their specifications. When that is done, and prices are understood, he will leave at once for Constantinople to submit leave at once for Constantinople to sub with the Union Ironworks of San Francompany's offer the Sultan will cable to Minister Ali Ferrouh Bey, the authority to sign a contract. It is expected, therefore, that final negotiations will be com-pleted by the Minister in order to avoid the delays of correspondence with Constantinople. The cruiser will be 330 feet long, of twenty-two knots, and 3,560 tons displacement. It will have 6-inch guns, and will use the same armor as is adopted by the American Navy for that class of vessels. At present only one ship is being negotiated for, but two may be ordered of the same type.

The admiral was seen yesterday morning at the Arlington.

"It has been suggested that the successful contractor may have trouble in col-lecting his money from the Sultan?" said a reporter. "That is absurd," retorted the sea fighter warmly. Is not the Turkish Empire, with a population of 47,000,000 people, good for the $2,000,000 involved in the cost of a

"The point is said to be not the Sultan's inability, but his dirinclination to pay. His enemies point to the fact that the American claims are still outstanding, and that nearly every European power has accounts against the Empire, which are awaiting settlement," was suggested. "Are these claims lawful ones?" retort-ed the admiral. "If they are why don't the powers enforce their collection. But you may know that the Sultan will never submit to imposition. He has 600,060 soldiers always under arms, and can summon an army of 2,000,000 in a fortnight. They are fully armed with Mauser rifles—one of the best small arms in the world-and their equipment is superior to Germany's.

"No," he continued, "there will be no "No," he continued, "there will be no trouble about collecting the price of this cruiser. There will be a cash payment with the order, and further installments as the work progresses. We now are rebuilding an old ironclad in German yards; another of our ships is being built in Italy; we have two under way in Turkish plants, and nobody ever heard of the Sultan refusing to meet payments on them."

General Legg spoke for the committee, and said that it was arranged at the last annual meeting of the National Union in Sioux City that it should meet this year in Washington. The vote to come here, he said, was practically unanimous, and now the comrades of the Union in Washington were of one mind as to giving the National Encampment a welcome worthy of the Na-tional Capital. They had come to the Com-missioners, he said, to ask their co-opera-tion in the matter. It was thought desirable that an official invitation to the National Union should be issued by the Com-missioners, and the committee also wished that they might co-operate at least in a personal capacity in the calling of a public meeting of representative citizens to aid in making appropriate ar angements for the meeting, which is scheduled to take place on October 2-5.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, dis-courages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidor diseased.

neys are out of order Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the ates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and blidder and the statement of the sta kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold
